LGBTQIA+ people struggle more with substance use

For many years, LGBTQIA+ people have found community in bars, clubs, and other places where drugs and alcohol are commonplace. For many, substances offer an escape from depression, anxiety, and trauma.

We see significantly higher rates of Substance Use Disorder (SUD) in LGBTQIA+ people than we do in the general population. You don't have to use to find a community.

There are welcoming and fun spaces where you can be yourself that are substance-free. It can be difficult, but it's worth it!
